following year. Six years after, the railway linking Bangkok and Nakorn Rachasima was started.

It was also during his reign (1886) that Thailand had its first public hospital.

King Chulalongkorn visited Europe twice --1897 and 1907 -- during his reign. He built close friendship with the heads of Russia, England, France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Austria, Hungary, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, and Switzerland. Those friendships greatly benefited the kingdom.

His fluency in English allowed him to communicate easily with visiting diplomats and dignitaries. Among the most eminent guests of the country during that time was the Russian tsar, Nicholas, who stayed at the Bang Pa-In Summer Palace during his visit here. A lasting friendship between the Thai King and the Russian monarch resulted from that visit.

THE WELL-LOVED KING CHULALONGKORN THE GREAT

On Oct. 23, Thailand commemorates the death of Maharaj (the Great) King Chulalongkorn, Rama V of Siam. On this day, Their Majesties King Bhumibol and Queen Sirikit will pay respects to their illustrious ancestor at the Royal Plaza in Bangkok.

The day is a public holiday in Thailand and many people will pay homage to King Chulalongkorn at his equestrian statue in Bangkok.

His 42-year reign brought unprecedented advances to the kingdom and to the lives of its people. The telephone, telegraph, postal service, railroads, educational, and judicial reforms, tramways, electricity, and improved medical training and treatment were but a few of the reforms and projects he initiated.

The son of King Mongkut and Queen Thepsirinthara, the King's greatest accomplishment was the abolition of slavery in the country. Up until his reign, thousands of Thais were born into serfdom. In 1905, he introduced a law which gradually freed the slaves from a life of unpaid servitude.

Under his guidance, the State Railway Department was established in 1890. And the concession for the first Bangkok-Samut Prakarn railway construction was granted to a Belgo-Danish company the
